

MELBOURNE POETRY MAP: AUDIO GRAFFITI

NIGHTHAWKING

Poetry Walk 5 - Yellow Map

This is one for those who are old enough to stay up late. If you can get past the bouncers, you might just get into the coolest club that used to be. Of course, then you might just get kicked out of the coolest club that never was and miss your tram. Kill time in the late hours, contemplating if you should give your tram fare to the world's worst busker. Find somewhere open all hours and go out onto the roof and remember just how glamorous you used to think this place was going to be. As soon as you grew up.

Start at the former Honkytonks, at the end of Duckboard Pl off Flinders Lane between Exhibition and Russell Sts. If it takes you a while to find it, don't panic, that was a part of the charm (apparently).

Track 1: Honkytonks – Santo Cazzati

Head north on Duckboard Pl toward Flinders Ln and turn left. Walk down Flinders Ln to the Purple Emerald Lounge Bar, 191 Flinders Ln. List about drunkenly if the mood so takes you.

Track 2: Drunk Tram Sways Away from Melba – Ezra Bix

When you get your head right, walk west on Flinders Ln toward Watson Pl, then turn right at Swanston St Walk. Follow Swanston St up to the corner of Little Bourke St. Look out for the guy playing the theremin while dressed as a robot.

Track 3: Swanston St, 10.58 – James Jackson

Continue north on Swanston Street Walk toward Lonsdale St to 252 Swanston St. Take the stairs six floors to the roof to the Rooftop Bar and Cinema. You'll probably deserve a drink by the time you get there.

Track 4: Red Lights – Josephine Rowe
